Reynolds retires after 34 years at Press

Wave 7 Oct 82

A party was held last Thursday to honor Farrel Reynolds, who has decided to retire after 43 years of printing. Wave Publishing employees helped celebrate the occasion.

Reynolds has been with the Wasatch Wave since 1934. He began work as a printer in Payson, UT., where he worked for J.M. Mountford. He learned the printing business at an early age. Mountfords printing shop was just through the block from the Reynold's home.

In 1941, WWII broke out, and Reynolds was drafted into the armed forces. While away, Mountford moved his printing business from the Payson area to Heber City.

Reynolds returned from the war, and once again was employed by Mountford. He moved to Heber City.

Reynolds has seen three different buildings while employed by Wave Publishing.

Two of the buildings were on Heber's Main Street, the other of course is the present building.

Reynolds has been running a Heidleberg press. This is an old letter press, one which takes hours sometimes to develope a job on. His patients has helped produce some beautiful printing.

Since 1976 he has been doing mostly specialty printing. Perforating, numbering, and scoring all part of the job.

He was always part of the newspaper. Typesetting columns or peicing together headlines, or correcting mistakes, Reynolds always strives for perfection.

He will continue to work part-time, as demanded. The company offers hardy "Thank You", for a job well done.

Farrel and his wife Francis, have 3 daughters and one son. Terry is employed by Wave Publishing presently as the dark room technician, and photographer.
